

Gioachino Rossini

La Cenerentola

CONDUCTOR
Fabio Luisi

PRODUCTION
Cesare Lievi

SET & COSTUME DESIGNER
Maurizio Balò

LIGHTING DESIGNER
Gigi Saccomandi

CHOREOGRAPHER
Daniela Schiavone

STAGE DIRECTOR
Eric Einhorn

GENERAL MANAGER
Peter Gelb

MUSIC DIRECTOR
James Levine

PRINCIPAL CONDUCTOR
Fabio Luisi

Dramma giocoso in two acts

Libretto by Jacopo Ferretti, based on the story Cendrillon by Charles Perrault

Saturday, May 10, 2014, 1:00–4:20 pm

Last time this season

The production of La Cenerentola was made possible by a generous gift from Alberto Vilar

The revival of this production was made possible by a gift from Mrs. Jayne Wrightsman

The Metropolitan Opera

2013–14 Season

The 38th Metropolitan Opera performance of

Gioachino Rossini's

La Cenerentola

This performance is being broadcast live over The Toll Brothers–Metropolitan Opera International Radio Network, sponsored by Toll Brothers, America's luxury homebuilder®, with generous long-term support from The Annenberg Foundation, The Neubauer Family Foundation, the Vincent A. Stabile Endowment for Broadcast Media, and contributions from listeners worldwide.

This performance is also being broadcast live on Metropolitan Opera Radio on SiriusXM channel 74.

Conductor
Fabio Luisi

IN ORDER OF VOCAL APPEARANCE

Clorinda,
Don Magnifico's daughter
Rachelle Durkin*

Don Magnifico, Baron
of Monte Fiascone
Alessandro Corbelli

Tisbe, Don Magnifico's
other daughter
Patricia Risley

Don Ramiro,
Prince of Salerno
Juan Diego Flórez

Angelina, known as Cinderella, Don
Magnifico's stepdaughter
Joyce DiDonato

Dandini, Ramiro's valet
Pietro Spagnoli

Alidoro, former advisor of Don Ramiro and an angel
in several guises
Luca Pisaroni

RECITATIVE ACCOMPANIST
Dennis Giauque

Saturday, May 10, 2014, 1:00–4:20 pm

This afternoon's performance is being transmitted live in high definition to movie theaters worldwide.

The Met: Live in HD series is made possible by a generous grant from its founding sponsor, The Neubauer Family Foundation.

Bloomberg is the global corporate sponsor of The Met: Live in HD.

Joyce DiDonato as Angelina in Rossini's
La Cenerentola

Chorus Master Donald Palumbo
Musical Preparation Dennis Giauque, Donna Racik, Carrie-Ann Matheson, and Steven Osgood
Assistant Stage Director Daniel Rigazzi
Prompter Donna Racik
Met Titles Sonya Friedman
Italian Coach Gildo Di Nunzio
Stylistic Advisor Philip Gossett
Scenery, properties, and electrical props constructed and painted in Metropolitan Opera Shops
Costumes executed by Metropolitan Opera
Costume Department
Wigs and makeup executed by Metropolitan Opera
Wig and Makeup Department

La Cenerentola is performed in the critical edition by Alberto Zedda and Philip Gossett, Fondazione Rossini, Pesaro,
in cooperation with Casa Ricordi, Milan

This performance is made possible in part by public funds from the New York State Council on the Arts.

This production uses fire effects.

Before the performance begins, please switch off cell phones and other electronic devices.

* Graduate of the
Lindemann Young Artist
Development Program

Yamaha. Celebrating 25 Years
as the Official Piano
of the Metropolitan Opera.

Latecomers will not be admitted during the performance.

Visit metopera.org

Met Titles

To activate, press the red button to the right of the screen in front of your seat and follow the instructions provided. To turn off the display, press the red button once again. If you have questions please ask an usher at intermission.

The Met
ropolitan
Opera

2013-14 SEASON

A scene from Madama Butterfly

The Metropolitan Opera is pleased to salute Bank of America in recognition of its generous support during the 2013-14 season.

Bank of America

Synopsis

Act I

SCENE 1 A room in the run-down mansion of Don Magnifico

SCENE 2 A hallway in Don Ramiro's palace

SCENE 3 The royal wine cellar

SCENE 4 The throne room in the prince's palace

SCENE 5 The seaside near the prince's palace

Intermission (AT APPROXIMATELY 2:45 PM)

Act II

SCENE 1 Don Ramiro's country house

SCENE 2 A room in Don Magnifico's mansion

SCENE 3 Don Ramiro's palace

Act I

Clorinda and Tisbe, daughters of Don Magnifico, are in the middle of one of their usual arguments. Their stepsister Angelina, who is called Cenerentola (Cinderella) and serves as the family maid, sings her favorite song, about a king who married a common girl. Suddenly Alidoro, tutor to the prince Don Ramiro, enters, dressed as a beggar. The stepsisters want to send him away, but Cenerentola gives him bread and coffee. Courtiers announce that Ramiro will soon pay a visit: he is looking for the most beautiful girl in the land and will hold a ball to choose his bride. Magnifico hopes that it will be one of the stepsisters: marriage to a wealthy man is the only way to save the family fortune. When everybody has left, Ramiro enters alone, dressed in his servant's clothes so he can freely observe the prospective brides. Cenerentola returns, and the two are immediately attracted to each other. He asks her who she is, and Cenerentola, confused, tries to explain, then runs away. Finally, the "prince" arrives—in fact Ramiro's valet, Dandini, in disguise. Magnifico, Clorinda, and Tisbe fall over themselves flattering him, and he invites them to the ball. Cenerentola asks to be taken along but Magnifico refuses. Ramiro notes how badly Cenerentola is treated. Alidoro says there should be a third daughter in the house but Magnifico claims she has died. Left alone with Cenerentola, Alidoro tells her he will take her to the ball and explains that God will reward her for her good heart.

Dandini shares his negative opinion of the two sisters with the prince. But both men are confused, since Alidoro has spoken well of one of Magnifico's daughters. Clorinda and Tisbe appear again, following Dandini, who still pretends to be the prince. When he offers Ramiro as a husband to the sister the prince does not marry, they are outraged at the idea of marrying a servant. Alidoro enters with a beautiful unknown lady who, strangely, resembles Cenerentola. Unable to make sense of the situation, they all sit down to supper, feeling as if in a dream.

Act II

Magnifico fears that the arrival of the stranger could ruin his daughters' chances to marry the prince. Cenerentola, tired of being pursued by Dandini, tells him that she is in love with his servant. Overhearing this, Ramiro is overjoyed and steps forward. Cenerentola, however, tells him that she will return home and does not want him to follow her. If he really cares for her, she says, he will find her. The prince resolves to win the mysterious girl.

Meanwhile Magnifico, who still thinks that Dandini is the prince, confronts him, insisting that he decide which of his daughters he will marry. When Dandini reveals that he is in fact the prince's servant, Magnifico is furious.

Magnifico and the sisters return home in a bad mood and order Cenerentola, again in rags, to prepare supper. During a thunderstorm, Alidoro arranges for Ramiro's carriage to break down in front of Magnifico's mansion so that the prince has to take refuge inside. Cenerentola and Ramiro recognize each other, as everybody comments on the situation. Ramiro threatens Magnifico and his daughters, who are unwilling to accept defeat, but Cenerentola asks him to forgive them.

At the prince's palace, Ramiro and Cenerentola celebrate their wedding. Magnifico tries to win the favor of the new princess, but she asks only to be acknowledged at last as his daughter. Born to misfortune, she has seen her life change and declares that the days of sitting by the fire are over.

Gioachino Rossini

La Cenerentola

Premiere: Teatro Valle, Rome, 1817

The story is simple: a young woman is denigrated by her own family but ultimately exalted by a prince who sees her true value. Rossini's operatic version of the Cinderella tale ("Cenerentola" in Italian) is charming, beautiful, touching in parts, and dramatically convincing. Jacopo Ferretti—on a tight schedule, juggling gigs with various theater managers, and contending with censors—resorted to a cut-and-paste method, pulling from a number of sources for his libretto. Though hastily assembled, the result was something new and well suited to Rossini's special talents. Instead of the fairy godmother of the familiar version, the character of Alidoro ("wings of gold") is introduced, a figure who manipulates the action and seems to possess magic qualities, though he is unmistakably human. Indeed, the story is less about magic and more about human nature. The opera, as a result, transcends its roots as a children's tale in its humane and fundamentally realistic approach, making the title heroine's transformation one of character rather than stereotype.

The Creators

Gioachino Rossini (1792–1868) was the world's foremost opera composer in his day. Over the course of just two decades he created more than 30 works, both comic and tragic, before inexplicably stopping opera composition in 1829, at the age of 37. His operas have always been admired for their charm, musical polish, and opportunity for extravagant vocalism. It is only within the past few decades that they have once again been recognized for their sophistication and dramatic insights. The libretto for La Cenerentola was provided by Jacopo Ferretti (1784–1852), a poet who also supplied librettos for Donizetti and other composers. Charles Perrault (1628–1703) penned the most famous version of the Cinderella story, in his still-popular collection Tales of Mother Goose, adding such now-popular features as the pumpkin carriage and the fairy godmother, neither of which appears in previous versions.

The Setting

Unlike most other versions, the opera places the story in a real locale, with the prince not a generic Prince Charming, but the prince of Salerno, an ancient seaside town in southern Italy.

The Music

The score of La Cenerentola seethes with the elegant buoyancy that is the hallmark of Rossini's style. The solo parts require astounding vocal abilities, though the pyrotechnics always serve a larger dramatic purpose. The beautiful line with which the prince introduces his duet with Cenerentola, "Un soave non so che," is a variation and expansion of the simple "Once upon a time..." ditty she sings in her first entrance. He is, quite literally, her dream come true. There is also genuine pathos, notably in the stately aria "Là del ciel nell'arcano profondo," in which the bass consoles Cenerentola with the promise of divine justice. Great comedy, an area in which Rossini stands supreme, runs throughout the score. It is most apparent in the dexterous patter of the duet for two basses in Act II. The art of ensemble writing is another realm in which Rossini proved himself a master: his ensembles are reflections on a moment frozen in time, which examine a feeling, idea, or situation from every conceivable angle. Two remarkable examples are Act I's "Signor, una parola," when Cenerentola begs to go to the ball, and especially "Questo è un nodo," the "ensemble of confusion" preceding the finale, in which each character tries to untangle the baffling knot of the situation with a florid vocal phrase. The final word, however, belongs to the title character, who concludes the evening with the solo "Nacqui all'affanno." This musical depiction of latent heroism bursting out of the humblest character is an elegant encapsulation of the power of this archetypal fairy tale.

La Cenerentola at the Met

The opera had its Met premiere in 1997 in the current production, with James Levine leading a cast that included Cecilia Bartoli, Ramón Vargas, Simone Alaimo, and Alessandro Corbelli in his company debut. (The opera had previously been given 56 times by the short-lived Metropolitan Opera National Company, including six performances at the former New York State Theater.) La Cenerentola has been revived in recent seasons with such singers as Jennifer Larmore, Sonia Ganassi, Olga Borodina, and Elina Garanča in the title role, Juan Diego Flórez and Lawrence Brownlee as Ramiro, and John Relyea and Ildar Abdrazakov as Alidoro.

Program Note

January 25, 1817, Teatro Valle, La Cenerentola, ossia La Bontà in Trionfo—another Roman premiere of dubious success for Gioachino Rossini. Not as bad as a year before at the Teatro Argentina, when Il Barbiere di Siviglia got shaved, pelted, and massacred. But poor Cinderella didn't do much better.

To commemorate the event, Jacopo Ferretti, La Cenerentola's librettist, composed a "tragedy," Jacopo, in which the ghosts of two poets (including Giuseppe Petrosellini, the librettist of Paisiello's earlier Barbiere) are summoned to judge Ferretti's sins. First, triviality—the servant-prince Dandini compares himself to a "cavolo," or cabbage. Next, anachronism—Ferretti names a 19th-century Roman madhouse in a story set in Salerno in an earlier period. And finally, blasphemy—Cupid is named "il guercetto amore," the squinting God of Love. The fictitious Jacopo pleads in vain: it's only an opera buffa. As punishment, he is forced to listen to an opera seria libretto by a rival, Michelangelo Prunetti. One stanza suffices. "Barbarous Rome! What a volley of stones! I die," Jacopo laments, falling senseless.

Such spirited literary hijinks reflect only a momentary setback in the history of La Cenerentola, ossia La Bontà in Trionfo ("Cinderella, or Goodness Triumphant"). By the end of the first season, the work had enchanted the Romans, as Rossini predicted it would. It is one of his few operas to remain in print and, with the exception of a period around the beginning of the 20th century, to have been performed regularly. Its popularity today dates from the legendary production by Jean-Pierre Ponnelle at Milan's La Scala in 1973, conducted by Claudio Abbado.

We have the prudishness of Roman censors to thank for the existence of La Cenerentola. Rossini had originally planned a comic opera to a libretto by his previous collaborator Gaetano Rossi, based on a French farce that Ferretti—hardly impartial—described as "one of the least moral comedies of the French theater." So many changes were demanded by the censors that Rossini asked Ferretti to choose a new subject. On December 23, 1816, they agreed on La Cenerentola; a little more than a month later, the opera had its premiere.

Both composer and librettist had help in achieving this minor miracle. Ferretti turned to earlier librettos derived from Charles Perrault's fairy tale, especially the 1814 Agatina, o La Virtù Premiata by Francesco Fiorini, with music by Stefano Pavesi. The absence of magical elements like pumpkins, talking cats, mice, lizards, and fairy godmothers in Ferretti's libretto simply repeats the similar situation in Fiorini's version. The absence of a glass slipper, on the other hand, is attributable to the inevitable Roman censors: no bare feet, please—bracelets will do. (These were the same censors who insisted that Otello and Desdemona reconcile at the end of Rossini's Otello.)

In composing the music to La Cenerentola, Rossini chose as a collaborator Luca Agolini, a Roman musician of some repute. Agolini wrote the secco recitative and three numbers: an aria for the prince's tutor, Alidoro; a chorus to open the second act; and an aria for one of the sisters, Clorinda. Alidoro's aria was replaced by Rossini himself in 1821–22 with a new piece for the same character, "Là del ciel nell'arcano profondo." Both the chorus and the Clorinda aria disappeared from the score early on. Except for the secco recitative, then, all the music performed here is Rossini's. With two exceptions, all of it was newly composed for La Cenerentola in that frenetic January. Only the sinfonia was borrowed from La Gazzetta, a comic opera Rossini had just written for Naples, and Cinderella's final rondo, the most famous piece of the score, is derived from Il Barbiere di Siviglia.

The history of this rondo is interesting. Rossini wrote a difficult aria, "Cessa di più resistere," for the great tenor Emanuele García, the original Count Almaviva, for the conclusion of Il Barbiere di Siviglia. His first Rosina, Geltrude Righetti-Giorgi, clearly liked the piece. In the next series of performances of Il Barbiere, given in Bologna during the spring of 1816, it recurs, but sung by Rosina, again Righetti-Giorgi. And who was the original Cinderella? Righetti-Giorgi, of course. Who could resist the wiles of a prima donna assoluta?

Later, in the second half of the 19th century, La Cenerentola was subject to violent manipulations, together with many of Rossini's operas. The orchestration was altered to bring it into line with later works. Rossini's occasional use of a single trombone yielded to the oppressive presence of three trombones; two horns became four; percussion was sprinkled everywhere (there is no percussion in Rossini's opera). In the original score two musicians alternate between playing flutes and piccolos; in the late-19th-century version, the piccolos are silenced, and the main tune of Cinderella's rondo is announced by a flute.

There were changes to the vocal parts as well. Rossini wrote florid melodic lines for Cinderella, Ramiro, and Dandini, but even with access to his manuscript it can be difficult to be certain what notes he had in mind. Late-19th-century editors, who didn't have the option of consulting the sources, invented what can only be called the most extraordinary nonsense, causing generations of singers to question their own sanity or that of the composer. In fact, while Rossini's music is difficult to sing, it is always logical.

In the early 1970s, Alberto Zedda prepared the first edition of La Cenerentola based on Rossini's autograph manuscript, housed today at the Accademia Filarmonica di Bologna. Only since then has it been possible to hear the opera again in a form Rossini would have recognized. That edition, prepared for republication by the present writer for the Fondazione Rossini of Pesaro, appeared in the Edizione critica delle opere di Gioachino Rossini. The edition of the Fondazione was presented for the first time in 1997 at the Metropolitan Opera with the premiere of this production and is the one performed here.

My favorite error in earlier editions is in Don Magnifico's cavatina in Act I, where Cinderella's stepfather, narrating the contents of his remarkable dream, complains to his daughters about the racket they've made: "Col cì cì, ciù ciù di botto mi faceste risvegliar" ("With your 'cì cì, ciù ciù' you suddenly woke me up"). Rossini's differentiated nonsense syllables ("cì cì, ciù ciù") were mistakenly printed as "cì cì cì cì," and when Don Magnifico should let loose his repeated sequence of "col cì cì, col ciù ciù," he was forced instead to declaim again and again "col cì cì, col cì cì." Ask any singer which version is more humane.

Finally, a word about cuts. Through much of the 20th century it was common practice to eliminate repeated passages in Rossini operas. Those passages, however, are intended to be opportunities for singers to introduce ornamentation. Rossini actually left a manuscript of variations that he prepared for a singer to use in the final rondo of La Cenerentola. While adopting Rossini's added ornamentation is never obligatory for a modern singer (who must have the freedom to develop ornamentation appropriate to his or her voice), Rossini's own suggestions for the rondo are made available for the first time through the critical edition.

La Cenerentola is one of Rossini's most thoroughly delightful works. Rooted solidly in the opera buffa tradition, it also allows ample room for sentiment and wonder. The transformation (musically and dramatically) of Cinderella from her fireside home and her simple nursery song, "Una volta c'era un rè," to the royal palace and luxuriant coloratura is lovely to behold. And what characters surround her: Don Magnifico, one of Rossini's most fully realized buffo roles; the two chattering sisters; Dandini, the servant as prince, whose gross imitation of the style of his master is hilarious; and the prince himself, a dashing figure who actually gets to sing a love duet with Cenerentola—which is more than Lindoro and Isabella or Almaviva and Rosina are allowed.

While La Cenerentola shares with L'Italiana in Algeri and Il Barbiere di Siviglia much of the exuberance of Rossini's style, its treatment of the heroine reveals a range of emotions that makes Rossini's opera a precursor of the sentimental comedies for which Donizetti is renowned.

—Philip Gossett

Saluting Sarah Billinghamurst

After a remarkable 20-year career at the Met, following 22 years at San Francisco Opera, Sarah Billinghamurst, the Met's Assistant General Manager in charge of artistic administration, will retire at the end of the current season. Billinghamurst is the woman who brought Valery Gergiev to the United States; who oversaw the world premieres of John Harbison's The Great Gatsby, Tobias Picker's An American Tragedy, and Tan Dun's The First Emperor; who engaged Robert Wilson to make his Met debut directing a legendary production of Lohengrin; who organized Met galas for James Levine and Joseph Volpe; and who oversaw farewell productions for legendary divas Mirella Freni (with Fedora) and fellow New Zealander Kiri Te Kanawa (with Capriccio). In the waning days of her final season, Billinghamurst sat down with radio host Margaret Juntwait to discuss her role at the Met (as she describes it) as "a cross between a psychologist, a house mother, and a prison warden."

You have a great variety of responsibilities—overseeing casting, scheduling, and long-term artistic planning. Tell us about how you're involved in finding artists to sing at the Met.

We've got a network of five or six people looking for new artists all the time. Obviously, we see new singers through our Lindemann Young Artist Development Program and the National Council Auditions, which [Artistic Administrator] Jonathan Friend and I attend as much as we can. We also have two artistic consultants in Europe, Eva Wagner-Pasquier and Ioan Holender, who go to many, many performances. And then Peter Gelb and Jonathan and I always spend a lot of the summers going to festivals in the U.S. and Europe to hear singers. Managers are always very quick to tell us of the person they regard as the next new Pavarotti or the next new Sutherland. They're normally not [laughs], but it's always very interesting to hear from them and check people out.

What is the most challenging part of the casting process?

The most challenging thing is to know where young singers are going, what their voices are going to be like in four or five years. Some of them are extremely sensible and will say, "No, I'd rather not do this role for the first time at the Met just yet. I'm only singing it in five years' time after trying it out in Essen, or somewhere like that." We also have to gauge career spans, as well. Sometimes singers themselves are very smart in the way they look at their careers and what they're going to do. Renée Fleming is a wonderful example of someone who has always sung exactly the right things at the right time in her career, and she's really extraordinary. And other people are phenomenons like Plácido Domingo, who without a doubt will still be singing on the stage of the Met in his 50th year of singing here.

Do you also keep your eyes and ears open for conductors?

Oh, yes! You wouldn't believe it, but one of the most difficult things is to find really, really good conductors for the Italian repertoire. Oddly enough, it's easier to find conductors for Janáček, Britten, Wagner, or Strauss.

Working at the Met and traveling over the years, have there been places where discovering artists and creativity came as a surprise?

Well, of course there was that amazing moment when eastern Europe opened up. We had had very few Russian artists, really. And all of a sudden there was this plethora of great singers—Olga Borodina, Dmitri Hvorostovsky, extraordinary people whom suddenly we could hire. I can remember going to Hamburg just before Perestroika for the first time to meet Valery Gergiev and listening to a concert of War and Peace. It was like going to an amazing banquet. There were these fantastic singers, just one after another after another—many of whom later came to sing at the Met. That was very exciting.

When you think back on your career, what are some of the most remarkable moments and productions you've been part of?

When I was in San Francisco, we had a wonderful decade of Jean-Pierre Ponnelle productions every single year. I can also remember a Frau ohne Schatten there with Birgit Nilsson, Leonie Rysanek, and Karl Böhm conducting. I started off by having the good fortune of hearing people like Margaret Price, Leontyne Price, Frederica von Stade, Geraint Evans... And then I've also been a part of the careers of singers such as Susan Graham and Debbie Voigt and Tom Hampson and Dolora Zajick. I watched their careers grow with great satisfaction. The productions here at the Met that I've really loved have ranged from things like From the House of the Dead, which I thought was absolutely extraordinary, to the new Butterfly. I still love the Zeffirelli Bohème. I loved War and Peace when we did it here at the Met. Capriccio, The Nose—all sorts of amazing operas I look back on. And of course anything that Maestro Levine has done has always been thrilling and emotional. That's something I'll continue to have in my retirement. I've loved working with Jimmy. He is an absolutely amazing music director and person.

MARY HILLIARD/MET OPERA

What has been the hardest part of your job?

I always say my job is a cross between a psychologist and a house mother and a prison warden. All these great artists are just human beings, and that's the one thing I've always done—treat them as human beings who happen to have an amazing and very fragile talent. And I can honestly say that there's not one singer or conductor that I have really disliked in my career! M

The Cast

Fabio Luisi

CONDUCTOR (GENOA, ITALY)

THIS SEASON La Cenerentola and Madama Butterfly at the Met; Don Carlo at La Scala; Fidelio, Aida, Les Contes d'Hoffmann, Don Carlo, and Bellini's La Straniera in Zurich; and concerts with the London Symphony Orchestra, Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra, Rome's Accademia Nazionale di Santa Cecilia, Cleveland Orchestra, and at Carnegie Hall with the Munich Philharmonic.

MET APPEARANCES Un Ballo in Maschera, Les Troyens, Aida, Don Giovanni, Manon, La Traviata, Le Nozze di Figaro, Elektra, Hansel and Gretel, Tosca, Lulu, Simon Boccanegra, Die Ägyptische Helena, Turandot, Ariadne auf Naxos, Rigoletto, Don Carlo (debut, 2005), and Wagner's Ring cycle.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS He is Principal Conductor of the Met, Chief Conductor of the Vienna Symphony, and General Music Director of the Zurich Opera. He made his La Scala debut in 2011 with Manon, his Salzburg Festival debut in 2003 leading Strauss's Die Liebe der Danae (returning the following season for Die Ägyptische Helena), and his American debut with the Lyric Opera of Chicago leading Rigoletto. He also appears regularly with the Vienna State Opera, Munich's Bavarian State Opera, and Berlin's Deutsche Oper and Staatsoper.

Joyce DiDonato

MEZZO-SOPRANO (KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI)

THIS SEASON Angelina in La Cenerentola at the Met, Romeo in I Capuleti e i Montecchi in Kansas City, the title role of Massenet's Cendrillon at Barcelona's Liceu, Sesto in La Clemenza di Tito at the Lyric Opera of Chicago, and the title role of Maria Stuarda at Covent Garden.

MET APPEARANCES Maria Stuarda, Sycorax in The Enchanted Island, Isolier in Le Comte Ory, the Composer in Ariadne auf Naxos, Cherubino in Le Nozze di Figaro (debut, 2005), Rosina in Il Barbiere di Siviglia, and Stéphano in Roméo et Juliette.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS Recent performances include Romeo in I Capuleti e i Montecchi with the San Francisco Opera, Elena in La Donna del Lago at Covent Garden and the Santa Fe Opera, Octavian in Der Rosenkavalier and Elena at La Scala, and Maria Stuarda at the Houston Grand Opera. She has also sung Rosina at the Deutsche Oper Berlin, Vienna State Opera, La Scala, Los Angeles Opera, and Covent Garden, Sister Helen in Jake Heggie's Dead Man Walking in Houston, Massenet's Cendrillon at Covent Garden, Adalgisa in Norma at the Salzburg Festival, Cherubino with the Lyric Opera of Chicago, Idamante in Idomeneo and Elena with the Paris Opera, and Angelina at La Scala. She was the 2007 recipient of the Met's Beverly Sills Artist Award.

Alessandro Corbelli

BARITONE (TURIN, ITALY)

THIS SEASON Don Magnifico in La Cenerentola at the Met, Dr. Bartolo with the San Francisco Opera and Lyric Opera of Chicago, and the title role of Gianni Schicchi at Turin's Teatro Regio.

MET APPEARANCES Gianni Schicchi, Dandini in La Cenerentola (debut, 1997), Sulpice in La Fille du Régiment, and Taddeo in L'Italiana in Algeri.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS Recent performances include Sulpice at the Paris Opera and Don Magnifico at the Vienna State Opera and Los Angeles Opera. He has also sung Don Magnifico at Munich's Bavarian State Opera, Covent Garden, Lyric Opera of Chicago, Paris's Théâtre des Champs-Élysées, and Glyndebourne Festival, the title role of Don Pasquale in Santiago and at the Théâtre des Champs-Élysées, Don Geronio in Il Turco in Italia in Munich, Falstaff at the Théâtre des Champs-Élysées, Sulpice at La Scala and Covent Garden, Gianni Schicchi at the Paris Opera and Glyndebourne Festival, Leporello in Don Giovanni at the Rome Opera, and Don Alfonso in Così fan tutte and Taddeo at the Paris Opera.

Juan Diego Flórez

TENOR (LIMA, PERU)

THIS SEASON Don Ramiro in La Cenerentola at the Met, Count Almaviva in Il Barbiere di Siviglia at Munich's Bavarian State Opera, the title role of Le Comte Ory at La Scala, Tonio in La Fille du Régiment at Covent Garden and at the Vienna State Opera, Ferdinand in La Favorite at Paris's Théâtre des Champs-Élysée, and Elvino in La Sonnambula in Barcelona.

MET APPEARANCES Comte Ory, Nemorino in L'Elisir d'Amore, Tonio, Elvino, Count Almaviva (debut, 2002), Ernesto in Don Pasquale, and Lindoro in L'Italiana in Algeri.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS Since making his operatic debut in 1996 in Matilde di Shabran at Pesaro's Rossini Opera Festival, he has sung a repertoire of 44 operas and appears regularly at all the leading opera houses in the world, including La Scala, Paris's Châtelet, the Deutsche Oper Berlin, Munich's Bavarian State Opera, Florence's Teatro Comunale, San Francisco Opera, Genoa's Teatro Carlo Felice, Naples's Teatro San Carlo, and Seville's Teatro de la Maestranza, among others.

Luca Pisaroni

BASS-BARITONE (CIUDAD BOLIVAR, VENEZUELA)

THIS SEASON Caliban in The Enchanted Island and Alidoro in La Cenerentola at the Met, the title role of Le Nozze di Figaro for his debut at Covent Garden, and Henry VIII in Anna Bolena and Figaro at the Vienna State Opera; concert appearances with the Berliner Philharmoniker, Orchestre National de France, and at the Vienna Musikverein; and recitals in London, Hamburg, Amsterdam, Heidelberg, Vienna, and Washington.

MET APPEARANCES Leporello in Don Giovanni, Publio in La Clemenza di Tito (debut, 2005), and Figaro.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS Recent performances include the title role of Rossini's Maometto II at Santa Fe Opera, Count Almaviva in Le Nozze di Figaro at the Paris Opera, Henry VIII with the Vienna State Opera on tour in Japan, and Leporello in Baden-Baden. He has also sung Argante in Rinaldo with Lyric Opera of Chicago, Count Almaviva with Houston Grand Opera, Guglielmo in Così fan tutte at the Glyndebourne Festival, Papageno in Die Zauberflöte at the Théâtre des Champs-Élysées, Melisso in Handel's Alcina at Paris's Bastille Opera, and Figaro with the San Francisco Opera, Paris Opera, and Vienna State Opera.

Pietro Spagnoli

BARITONE (ROME, ITALY)

THIS SEASON Dandini in La Cenerentola for his debut at the Met, Sulpice in La Fille du Régiment at Covent Garden, Don Alfonso in Così fan tutte at the Vienna State Opera, Count Almaviva in Le Nozze di Figaro in Barcelona, and Prosdócimo in Il Turco in Italia at the Aix-en-Provence Festival.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS Recent performances include Dr. Dulcamara in L'Elisir d'Amore in Nice, Rodomonte in Haydn's Orlando Paladino at the Drottningholm Festival, Count Almaviva at the Vienna State Opera, Riccardo in I Puritani in concert with the Lyon Opera, Raimbaud in Le Comte Ory at Vienna's Theater an der Wien, Mustafà in L'Italiana in Algeri in Oviedo, and Antonio in Linda di Chamounix in Barcelona. He has also sung Dandini at La Scala, the Glyndebourne Festival, and Paris's Théâtre des Champs-Élysées; Figaro in Le Nozze di Figaro at the Théâtre des Champs-Élysées, Covent Garden, and Florence's Maggio Musicale; and Rodomonte at the Deutsche Oper Berlin.